L6 What Medical Historians Can Learn from Journalists (and Vice Versa)

Location: St. Croix I

Chair: Jack El-Hai, Minneapolis, MN

Roundtable:

- Jack El-Hai, writer and book author, Minneapolis, MN
- Barron Lerner, New York University Langone School of Medicine, New York, NY
- Catherine Madison, writer and book author, Minneapolis, MN
- Susan Perry, writer and book author, Minneapolis, MN
- Dominique Tobbell, University of Minnesota, Minneapolis, MN

This session explores ways in which medical historians and journalists can teach one another and work together to create more effective medical-history scholarship and popular narratives about the history of medicine. Members of the roundtable panel will discuss such questions as:

1. What has traditionally kept apart medical historians and journalists writing about the history of medicine?

2. What is different and similar about the approaches of medical historians and journalists?
3. What skills do journalists have that medical historians could learn?
4. What skills do medical historians have that journalists could learn?
5. Are there practical ways for medical historians and journalists to collaborate?
6. What kinds of venues and gathering places, actual and virtual, could encourage beneficial exchanges of ideas?

NEW FROM PITTSBURGH

The Andean Wonder Drug

Cinchona Bark and Imperial Science in the Spanish Atlantic, 1630–1800

Matthew James Crawford

9780822944522 • 336 pp. • Cloth • $45.00

In the eighteenth century, malaria was a prevalent and deadly disease, and the only effective treatment was found in the medicinal bark harvested from cinchona trees that would later give rise to the drug quinine. Crawford uses the story of cinchona bark to demonstrate how the imperial politics of knowledge in the Spanish Atlantic ultimately undermined efforts to transform European science into a tool of empire.

Old Age, New Science

Gerontologists and Their Biosocial Visions, 1900–1960

Hyung Wook Park

9780822944492 • 384 pp. • Cloth • $49.95

This book focuses on the “biosocial visions” shared by early American and British gerontologists who believed the phenomenon of aging was not just biological, but social in nature. Park shows how their visions shaped popular discourses on aging, directly influenced the institutionalization of gerontology, and also reflected the class, gender, and race biases of their founders.

Epidemics, Empire, and Environments

Cholera in Madras and Quebec City, 1818–1910

Michael Zeheter

9780822944461 • 336 pp. • Cloth • $45.00

Zeheter offers a probing case study of the environmental changes made to fight cholera in two markedly different British colonies: Madras in India and Quebec City in Canada. He examines the complex political and economic factors that came to bear on the reshaping of each colony’s environment and the urgency placed on disease control.

Victorian Medicine and Popular Culture

Edited by Louise Penner and Tabitha Sparks

9781848935693 • 256 pp. • Hardcover • $45.00

This collection of essays explores the rise of scientific medicine and its impact on Victorian popular culture. It offers an interdisciplinary study involving public health, cultural studies, the history of medicine, literature and the theatre, providing new insights into Victorian culture and society.
