SURGEON TO SOLDIERS

Diary and Records of the Surgical Consultant, Allied Force Headquarters, World War II, by EDWARD D. CHURCHILL, M.D., John Homans Professor Emeritus of Surgery, Harvard University; formerly Chief, General Surgical Services, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston.

Combat surgery--the progress in military medicine during World War II--wound management and mismanagement--these are just some of the subjects Dr. Churchill discusses in this highly personalized account of his experiences as Consultant to American Surgeons in the North African-Mediterranean Theater of Operations. Liberal use of case histories, official medical reports, and the experience of other combat surgeons add further dimension to this informal, first-hand account of surgery and surgeons in just about every type of hospital in an overseas theater.

THE SHEPPARD AND ENOCH PRATT HOSPITAL 1853-1970 A History

by BLISS FORBUSH, LL.D., President, Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital; Headmaster Emeritus, Baltimore Friends School

Here is the history of the noted Sheppard and Enoch Pratt Hospital, from its very beginnings. This story, told in a richly anecdotal and warmly human manner, was developed from thousands of pages of reports, minutes of meetings, essays, reprints, letters, and newspaper accounts preserved in the hospital files. The hospital is representative of the important contributions that private foundations have made to the growth and development of American psychiatry. Its history is a sample of the changes in the evolution of psychiatry, administration, research, and teaching.
